(Please see separate specs for traditional screenprinting)

FOR DIGITAL DIRECT TO GARMENT PRINTING:

For digital direct to garment printing onto white natural, or ash shirts where no white ink is printed, we can use any of the file types mentioned above for screenprinting, or we can also use a high resolution, clean JPEG file at the physical size of the image to be printed if the other files types are not available.

For digital direct to garment printing onto any color shirt where white ink is printed, we can use any of the file types mentioned above, except for the one for process printing onto white shirts.

For any of the printing methods mentioned above, we can use the vector art file as described for spot color screenprinting.
